

The NEW YORK Sun

WEEKEND EDITION, APRIL 16-18, 2004

NO BAN HERE The Gitterman Gallery displays a collection of photographs taken on London's now-demolished Southam Street in the 1950s and '60s by Roger Mayne. Above, 'Boys Smoking, Southam Street, North Kensington, London' (1957).

ART

LONDON IN MANHATTAN British photographer Roger Mayne's images of the now-demolished Southam Street in West London, taken in the 1950s and 1960s, go on display today. Images of working class Londoners and children playing soccer in the street convey a sense of immediacy. Today through Saturday, June 5, Wednesday-Saturday, 11 a.m.-6 p.m., Gitterman Gallery, 170 E. 75th St., between Third and Lexington avenues, 212-734-0868, free.